INEFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

In seeking to set aside/vacate their convictions, Defendants claim ineffective assistance of counsel. To prevail on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, Defendants must establish that counsel's conduct fell below an objectively reasonable standard, and that but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984). Thus, Defendants must prove inadequate performance and actual prejudice. Id. at 686. It is the Defendants' duty to make a detailed and particularized claim of error which can be thoughtfully reviewed. United States v. Hearst, 638 F.2d 1190, 1994 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 938 (1981). Conclusory assertions without a basis in the record are insufficient. Id; Miller v. United States, 339 F.2d 581 (9th Cir. 1964).

Defendants claims can be decided on the record, therefore no evidentiary hearing is necessary.

Trial Preparation and Tactics

Defendants claim that the cumulative effect of trial counsel's errors denied them effective assistance of counsel.

1). Defendants claim that trial counsel failed to adequately investigate the case, failed to locate and interview witnesses, and failed to have a trial plan. These claims lack particularity, and Defendants have not shown how evidence garnered from these potential witnesses would have altered the outcome of the trial. 2). Possible additional impeaching information regarding a King County civil case involving Darnell Mueller and Wilma Mallicoat, if elicited, would not have altered the outcome of the trial. 3). Defendants claim that counsel failed to pursue various issues. Regarding the sufficiency of mail fraud charges, this issue was addressed during closing argument, in the motion for acquittal, and on appeal. Defendants also claim counsel overlooked authority which they claim prohibits conviction for bank fraud where Defendant merely presents a bad check. The authority cited, Williams v. United States, 458 U.S. 279 (1982), involves the false statement statute at 18 U.S.C §1014, not the bank fraud statute at 18 U.S.C §1344. Furthermore, the record is replete with Page 2 instances of Defendants fraudulent conduct. 4). Defendants cite no authority to support their claim that defense counsel's division of responsibility for cross-examining witnesses was improper. 5). Stipulations that Defendants now object to were signed by both defendants and read into the record without objection. The stipulations represented what the witness would say if called to testify, and included no admissions by Defendants. 6). Defendant Fain's complaint that the decision to waive jury trial was forced on him also lacks merit. Each defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived those rights, on the record and in writing. 7). Fain argues counsel Olson advised him to "skip" the presentence interview, disallowing the opportunity for defendant to make changes, amendments or object to the probation report. This claim lacks merit. The probation department made the PSR available to defense counsel before sentencing, and counsel responded with objections to the report, while acknowledging that Mr. Fain had filed his own objections to the PSR. 8). Defendant Fain's claim that counsel was deficient for presenting no independent trial witnesses must fail, as Defendant cannot show how he was prejudiced. The aforementioned errors alleged by Defendant do not demonstrate inadequate performance by counsel or prejudice to Defendants. Damages, Failure to File Motion 9). The issue of damages - i.e., calculation of loss amounts, was addressed at trial, sentencing, and on appeal. Defendants submitted pro se objections to the loss amounts, and counsel challenged the loss figures in the sentencing memorandum. 10). Defendants suffered no prejudice from counsel's failure to file a Motion for New Trial or Motion to Reduce Sentence. Counsel filed a Motion for Judgment of Acquittal under Rule 29, which served to preserve appellate issues, and there was no basis for counsel to file a Rule 35 motion. Counsel does not have a constitutional duty to raise every nonfrivolous issue proposed by Defendant. Jones v. Banner, 463 U.S 745, 751 (1983). Counsel selected issues for appeal believed to have merit. The several issues which defendants claim should have been raised in their appeal lack particularity, and do not provide for meaningful review. There has been no showing of ineffectiveness of counsel for failure to raise them, and no showing of likelihood of success.

Defendants' claim that the Court failed to apply the correct elements of the charged crimes and failed to address variances between the charges and the proof at trial lack particularity, failing to identify which crimes, which elements were deficient, or what evidence was at variance.

Defendants' claims that the District Court failed to address a Brady violation, and of prosecutorial misconduct during interviews of potential witnesses fail for lack particularity. Defendants' claim that the court failed to conduct a hearing on damages at sentencing lacks merit. The issue of loss amount was fully briefed, argued before and ruled upon by the district court, and made a subject of appeal.

Defendants claim that the trial judge was physically and mentally impaired during conduct of the case lacks merit. The government has fully addressed these claims in its brief, and none of these occurrences suggests any impairment by the Court. Defendants' motion for recusal was previously denied.

BLAKELY CHALLENGES

Defendants seek to apply the rule set forth in Blakely v. Washington, 124 S.Ct. 2531 (June 24, 2004) to invalidate their sentences. The Ninth Circuit extended the court's reasoning in Blakely to the federal sentencing guidelines in United States v. Ameline, 376 F.3d 967 (9th Cir. 2004). In United States v Booker, 125 S.Ct. 738 (2005), the Supreme Court held that the Sixth Amendment jury trial requirement as construed by Apprendi and Blakely applied to the federal guidelines. Id. at 745.

Defendants' convictions were final before Blakely. The Supreme Court has not made Blakely

3	pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 2255 is DENIED.
4	In order for an appeal to proceed, this Court must issue a Certificate of Appealability. See 28
5	U.S.C. §2253; United States v. Asrar , 108 F.3d 217 (9 th Cir. 1997). For the certificate to issue, this

10	For the foregoing reasons, the Court declines to issue a Certificate of Appealability because
